Apart from being an active performer Sangeetha is the proud founder of the organisation Ragarashmi Foundation for Art & Culture . This collective has come together for the preservation and protection of artists in need- prioritising women and youth who continue their practice while struggling to make a living.

The vision that drives Ragarashmi is building an 'art friendly' society, where diverse art forms are accessible to everyone, making them available to women and children in particular and people of all ages.

The most immediate need identified by the collective is the creation of reasonable livelihood for artists through scholastic engagement, allowing arts education to improve and artists to live with independence and dignity.

Sangeetha believes “Art as a medium can bring in a major change in the society and the way people think.

Women in India , in the field of art need more opportunities today . Body shape or colour or age, nothing should stop a woman from opportunities, Talent but only talent should be the criteria . Youth must believe Art can be a mainstream profession and not just a hobby”.

Sangeetha has actively taken part in various projects that involved music as a tool to communicate to the society . One such project “Strisvara” brought in 15 women musicians from various backgrounds including tribal musicians . It was conducted in India and Sweden in 2016 and 2017
